

Passionate about recycling

With the 'recession', 'credit crunch' and 'economic climate' being the latest news, Christchurch based Time Business Systems are keen to ensure that recycling and green issues also remain high on the business agenda.

"A few years ago, 'green' 'eco' and 'recycle' seemed to be the buzz words in business" comments Selwyn Burke, MD of Time. "We are keen that all the valuable messages are not lost because businesses have had to become much more financially focussed."

"We're passionate about recycling, and we are delighted that our main supplier, Ricoh, is completely in tune with our own values. They have their own, unique recycling 'Green Centre'. Owned and staffed by Ricoh near Wellingborough, Northampton. 43,000 square feet are dedicated to processing multifunctional copier and printer based products. The equipment is either returned back into the field as a reconditioned unit or stripped of all components, many of which can be reused. Finally the remaining unit and components are moved on for recycling."

At the Green Centre it seems unusual that recycling is actually the last thing they want to do. Only around one per cent of kit is recycled – the rest is reconditioned and reused and its final end-of-life date postponed indefinitely. This fits in with a culture to reduce, reuse, recycle. The environmental footprint of the product is vastly reduced using this philosophy.
